Even with the challenge of a global pandemic which forced the Davis County Library to close for its longest time ever, the Library continued to provide patrons with new opportunities. In early May 2020, the Library introduced curbside pickup. Temporary online cards allowed new patrons better access to library resources from home. The children's Summer Reading program introduced a new online aspect, and the library was able to increase participation with adults and teens by expanding offerings.

Despite setbacks, construction began on a new library in Clearfield. The new branch will be located in the heart of downtown, providing service on two floors, and will offer new opportunities for technology previously not available to library patrons. Construction is slated for completion in Fall 2021.

The Library said goodbye to former director Chris Sanford who retired in late November. Josh Johnson was selected as the fifth director of the Davis County Library. The Library continues to create an atmosphere of learning and inclusion for all patrons of Davis County.
